

Hello, I'm

Geri L. Anderson

ATTORNEY AT LAW

Geri Anderson is an attorney at Everbright Legacy Law, where her practice is focused on estate planning, probate, and estate and trust administration. She helps clients move through these processes with confidence and efficiency, identifying potential hurdles and pitfalls early so the path forward feels manageable rather than overwhelming.

Relatable and down-to-earth, Geri wants every client to walk away from their interactions with her knowing that the legal system isn't something to fear. She believes in being someone clients can rely on, ensuring they feel heard and that their unique needs and experiences truly matter as they navigate what comes next.

Those who know Geri well describe her as:

- Level-headed – As the mother of four young boys, she thrives at bringing order to chaos.
- Compassionate – Having navigated many of the same challenges as her clients, she understands the fear of the unknown, which allows her to guide others through theirs with confidence and reassurance.
- Friendly – She loves people. Their stories, their quirks, and the small details that make each person who they are.

Geri's path to elder law is a personal one. Her father was an estate-planning attorney for more than fifty years, and he often said he had no clients, only friends he helped with their legal problems. He had a gift for setting people at ease and simplifying complicated processes, and he was a beloved attorney to everyone he served. As Geri moved through high school and college, she realized she wanted work that left her as fulfilled as he was, and it was an honor to practice alongside him for more than a decade before he passed away.
